Managing the Different Generations in the Workplace

Tuesday, June 24, 2008

9:00 a.m. – 12 noon

As many managers and supervisors have discovered, managing and motivating a diverse workforce can be very challenging. With more and more members of the youngest generation gaining employment and working alongside the most senior employees, many managers are learning that a one-size-fit-all management style simply does not exist. This workshop will teach you techniques to effectively lead your staff despite any generational differences and encourage others to learn from diversity. Topics covered:

- ✓ How to identify the four generations
- ✓ How to draw on their different strengths
- ✓ How to adapt your management style for each generation
